

Unmatched ability Eurocell buys Alunet

Following regulatory approval European software provider Forterro has successfully completed its acquisition of Orgadata AG. This deal follows the recent acquisition of BM Group, further strengthening Forterro's footprint in the fenestration software market and creating significant opportunities for innovation and market growth.

With the completion of the Orgadata acquisition, Forterro now officially integrates Logikal, Orgadata's software for designing, calculating and producing windows, doors and curtain walls, into its software portfolio. At the same time, the addition of BM Group brings complementary solutions such as Evolution and Touch.

"This marks an exciting new chapter for Forterro," says Marcus Pannier, president for all lines of business within Forterro. "With Orgadata and BM Group now part of Forterro, we have an unmatched ability to serve the windows and doors market with software technology. The combination of Logikal's global footprint and BM Group's expertise in fabrication and order processing solutions creates an incredible synergy that will drive digitalisation and efficiency for our customers."

Orgadata's strong presence across Germany and international markets, combined with BM Group's deep expertise in the UK and Ireland, will enable Forterro to support manufacturers across multiple Derbyshire-based Eurocell has expanded its residential aluminium systems with the acquisition of Alunet Group.

A Eurocell spokesman says this is a key moment in its five-year strategy to grow the business to £500m in revenue. The acquisition enables Eurocell to expand its manufacturing and distribution capabilities with aluminum window and door profiles, components for the fabrication of residential garage doors and expanded production of solid timber-core composite doors.

It positions Eurocell as a major composite door supplier. It now offers a full range of foam-filled and solid timber-core, alongside its PVC panel doors. It also marks Eurocell's entry into the aluminium garage door market.

Eurocell manufactures, distributes, and recycles PVC-U windows, doors and building products and has over 200 branches across the UK, it also offers a wide range of products for home
