

Get Your Free Tickets For The Greatest FIT Show Yet

Visitors can now register for free to attend the UK's number one event for the window, door, flat glass, hardware, roofing and components industry via the FIT Show website.

There will be a huge array of new products and upgrades to old to see at the Birmingham NEC. The organisers are on target to increase the footprint of the event by 30%, occupying an extra hall to build on its 2023 edition.

Kickstarting this FIT Show year with a bang, several companies have joined the lineup in the last month alone. The latest include Victorian Sliders, Invisifold, Regalead, Kean Tools, Vacuum Lifting Solutions, Warringtonfire Testing & Certification, The Door & Hardware Federation, Access Marketing, Balls2Marketing, Dufeu IT Solutions and Safeware.

Window profile companies set to exhibit this year include AluK, Cortizo, Smart Systems, Exlabesa, Aluplast, Selecta Systems and The Residence Collectio.

Robin Clevett joins the line-up

Self-confessed carpentry, joinery and building fanatic, Robin Clevett (pictured) has taken on the role of official ambassador for the FIT Show. Clevett, who boasts over 134,000 YouTube subscribers, more than 54,000 Instagram followers and hosts The Carpentry Show on FIX Radio, will play a hands-on role as part of the Installer Demo Zone, as well as participating in sessions on the main seminar stage.

The Installer Demo Zone

The Installer Demo Zone has been expanded (it was launched in 2023) to incorporate a more diverse product demonstration offering as well as a marketplace area to purchase the latest tools, and workwear. The show will also include a larger focus on roofing and outdoor living, with a focus on helping installers to broaden their portfolios to mitigate the ongoing economic challenges they are facing.

Clevett says: "I'm really pleased to be working with the FIT Show team to help bring the campaign to life in the run up to and during the event. I'm constantly looking at new products for my projects, as well as better and faster ways to install them.

"I'm familiar with a number of the brands that are exhibiting at the show. I'm excited by the prospect of unearthing new solutions that could help me and visitors deliver more sophisticated projects and installations.

"I'm looking forward to three days helping to bring products and solutions to life in the Installer Demo Zone."

FIT Show event director, Nickie West adds: "With a raft of construction projects under his belt thanks to his 25+ year career as a professional joiner and builder, Robin is perfectly placed to share his hints and tips for delivering quality installations, as well as offering advice and support on running your own business."

Educational programme

The GGF and FENSA will partner with FIT Show to deliver another first class CPD certified learning programme. The programme will follow the theme of 'solutions and inspiration', running across the three days of the show. The content is free to access for all visitors and has been carefully crafted to cover important updates to building regulations, health & safety, sustainability, new technology and innovation and much more.

Mark your calendar now

Nickie West says: "It's always exciting when we officially open registration for FIT Show. With a bigger footprint, more diverse range of brands and products than ever before, a challenging political and economical backdrop, impending regulatory and legislative changes, not to mention no FIT Show until 2027, the reasons to attend FIT Show have never been greater. Quite simply, FIT Show 2025 should be an essential fixture in everyone's industry calendar this year." i
